Events, Meetings and Conferences Planning for Privacy

Privacy is a growing concern for businesses of all sizes. Meetings and conferences can involve a variety of sensitive topics including corporate strategy, mergers and acquisitions, executive terminations, or other negotiations to name a few. Security for these discussions needs to be taken seriously by all those involved.

When planning for meetings and events, organizers should take into consideration the confidential nature of the various activities and conversations that will occur. Many sensitive meetings will take place at off-site locations such as hotels or conference centers. Not all of these locations will have the level of security found in the corporate offices. Additional attention and protection will be required for these areas.

Exec Security specializes in technical surveillance countermeasures (TSCM), often referred to as electronic bug sweeps. TSCM is the practice of detecting, uncovering, and preventing eavesdropping threats and unauthorized surveillance. Professional TSCM requires knowledge of data and communications systems and an understanding infrastructure vulnerabilities. We use the most advanced professional detection equipment and the highest information security practices to support our clients. We have worked with companies in a variety of industries; from small start-ups to large manufacturing firms and Fortune 100 corporations.

No matter what industry your organization is in, information leaks could be devastating. Such loss can directly affect stock value, hurt negotiations, and lead to loss of trade secrets. It could also put executives' safety at risk, and damage corporate reputation. You can trust Exec Security TSCM to help secure your conferences, meetings, and special events.
